

ABOUT THE PROGRAM

NYLaughs, a New York-based nonprofit that produces free comedy events in public spaces to inspire audiences, enrich the lives of New Yorkers, and connect people through humor, is partnering with the New York Public Library St. George Branch to create programming to amplify diverse voices in entertainment & comedy.

PROGRAM OBJECTIVE

To execute an educational and informative series geared toward creative people of color, highlighting professions and opportunities in entertainment and comedy beyond performance. The series features notable professionals in various entertainment fields who will share stories, mentorship, and advice for people of color who aspire to enter the entertainment industry. The series will in part examine stand up comedy as both an expressive art form with cultural, creative, and social significance and an industry with career opportunities. The first three sessions will be hosted by notable comedian, Jordan Carlos, and will feature comedy performances by guest comics at each bootcamp.

DETAILS

The monthly series will take place Saturdays from 11:30-1:00 at the St. George branch of the Staten Island Library in front of a live audience, broadcast on Staten Island TV, and streamed online and available for viewing by their followers and those of the NYPL. The event is free to the public but will require a reservation for both virtual and in-person viewing.

EVENT STRUCTURE

The event is led by a host. The event will begin with a stand up performance from a comedian, followed by a discussion and Q&A with various experts who can speak to diversity in their respective fields.

EXPERT | GUEST SPEAKERS

The guest speaker will participate remotely via Zoom. The role of the expert will be to speak for approximately 60 mins (including Q&A and banter with host and comedian). Speakers are encouraged to discuss their various career journeys and share tools and tips for entering, surviving and succeeding in the entertainment industry as a person of color. Anecdotes from their experiences will position our speakers as mentors for the audience who might be considering following the same path!
